GANDHI, ROWLATT SATYAGRAHA AND BRITISH IMPERIALISM

Emergence of Mass Movements in Punjab & Delhi

Hari Singh, Ph.D., H.E.S.
Principal

Faridabad, Haryana

ISBN 81-85-85004-22-6 1998 Rs. 210

ABOUT THE BOOK

This work is a valuable contribution to the study of national liberation movement in India. Endowed with a freshness of approach, the historical process has been explained in the background of socio-economic tensions generated by the First World War and political mobilization of the masses through the charismatic personality of Mahatma Gandhi who led the first All India Mass Movement against the Rowlatt Bills in 1919. The area chosen for this, vivid in-depth study, Punjab and Delhi, is most appropriate as the movement was intense and forceful in this region. It is here that the forces of British imperialism clashed with Indian nationalism and the gruesome tragedy of Jallianwala Bagh took place. It was a period of excitement and ferment when the alien bureaucracy posed a challenge to the people in the name of Rowlatt Bills. So sudden was the reaction that Mahatma Gandhi became the mentor, a messiah and protector of Human values. Undaunted by British bullets, he gave a call for nation-wide Satyagraha and the programme included unity, self-sacrifice and fighting evil through non-violent struggle. This work is a definitive contribution to the study of the history of mass movements, as it captures their essence by discussing in detail day-to-day happenings, the mob-behaviour, the role of primary and secondary leaders and finally the influence of Mahatma Gandhi on the course of event. Rich in the use of rare and hitherto unexplored material, this work would also act as a model for researchers, absorbing to general readers and a reference tool for social scientists who wish to study the mechanism of British imperialism in colonial set-up.

INDIAN MUSIC LITERATURE

MOHAMMAD HAROON
M.A., M.Lib., Inf.Sc.

Faculty of Music and Fine Arts
University of Delhi

ABOUT THE BOOK

Indian music is one of oldest systems of the world. Throughout the ages, the education in the fine arts of Indian music was imparted through indigenous way called Guru Shishya Parampara or Gharana system. Upto the mid of the present century this traditional style of music education was prevalent.

After Independence, with so many upheavals in the socio-economic front, the music too faced some favourable change e.g. formal education system, enhanced social respectablility, more public interest and enormous literary activities in the form of research and publications. The introduction of music at school, college and university levels generated the demand for degrees for employment and promotion accelerated the research activities.

For the research workers in Indian music, the search for relevant literature is extra hard. Reference works such as encyclopaedias, indexing and abstracting periodicals, discographies, good subject bibliographies and dictionaries are not available.

A lot of literature on Indian music is flowing every year in the form of concert reviews and general articles in newspapers, music journals, general magazines, books and research theses. This flow of information, must be organised for fruitful utilization. There was drastic need for a systematically arranged music bibliography for the music scholars. The present work bridges this gap.

This work covers all the aspects of Indian music, Hindustani music, Karnataka music, instruments and instrumental music, sacred music, semi-classical music, musicology and music education. The information is contained in over 2500 bibliographical entries collected from 150 journals, newspapers, 450 books and about 200 theses accepted in Indian and foreign universities.
